

National Initiative for Children's Healthcare Quality

Granite State Fit Kids Joins in National Effort to Improve care for Overweight Children

In an effort to accelerate improvement in the care that is delivered to children who are overweight or at risk for overweight, The National Initiative for Children's Healthcare Quality recently launched a national search to identify the most innovative and promising programs addressing childhood Obesity. Dr. Charles Cappetta submitted his program, Granite State FitKids to contribute to identifying best practices in systematic and clinical improvement initiatives dealing with childhood obesity.

The latest innovations, recommendations and best practices in health care practice and policy will be discussed in detail at the National Health Care Congress on Childhood Obesity. Following the Congress NICHQ will institute a web-based learning network for the sharing of effective strategies and materials. The National Congress will take place on September 20, 2006 in Washington, DC.

For more information about how to get involved or to enroll please visit www.nichq.org or email nwilly@nichq.org for more information.